Vic Richardson

Vic is Director of Education for Embassy CES, UK and Director of the International Teacher Training Institute, with key responsibility for the quality and development of teacher training programmes. His experience includes teaching, teacher training, materials writing, academic management, examining and speaking at conferences. He is closely connected with the Cambridge TESOL qualification, a Joint Chief Assessor (JCA) for the CELTA and DELTA qualifications.

Programme range

We offer a wide choice of intensive and practical programmes. Each programme contains a balance of input, practical work, communicative activity, demonstration, discussion and reflection. An important objective is that participants leave with a large range of activities for immediate use and a clear direction for their longer-term development.

People-centred

Each programme is designed to respond to the needs and the experience of participants, and to enable them to appreciate their strengths and identify their developmental needs. Participants are encouraged to develop their own teaching style within the framework of current and new trends in language learning.

Practical training

The core focus of our training is to provide you with practical skills which you can use in real situations straight away. Techniques are presented for you to experience, evaluate, discuss, practise and apply to your own teaching situations.

Training centres

Our centres in Hastings, Cambridge, London, Brighton & Hove and New York share a common commitment to innovation and excellence on which the Institute is founded. Training departments are located within the dynamic atmosphere of active year-round Embassy CES language schools offering access to teachers, resources and class observation.
