

experienced and specialist trainers

Our trainers are specialists in their fields, well known in the TESOL profession for their workshops, programmes, conference contributions and publications. They are chosen for their personal and professional qualities, and for their insight and understanding developed from working with teachers from many countries

Adrian Underhill

Adrian is Training Consultant for Study Group and plays a key role in the development of our teacher training programmes. He has wide experience in training teachers, teacher trainers and school managers, and has developed whole-person approaches to training and learning. He is author and editor of the Macmillan Teacher Development Series, and past President of the International Association of Teachers of English as a Foreign Language.
